DEDICATION

A touch of Welsh warmth and humor with the wisdom gained from service and experience will remain with Cheltenham many years after Mr. Samuels retires.

An able administrator, Mr. Samuels' neatness, organization, and common sense made rostering rational and course-dropping rare; while as a teacher, his love of chemistry and faith in its power to contribute something of value to man has given his students an excellent background in the physical sciences.

Knowledge may be gained from books and charts, but wisdom comes from a man's own mind and heart. We, as students, can develop wisdom by joining personal experiences with the ideas and the principles of those who are wiser than we. Mr. Samuels has much to offer us of self-learned wisdom. His retirement next year will be merely a physical one; long after he leaves, long after we have left, his thoughts and actions shall remain with us.

ACTIVITIES

School is a life beyond the academic rigors of the classroom. School is more than equations, essays, lectures, graphs. School is a home, the realm of our activity. Two-fifty has come. What do we do now? Time on our hands—minds and bodies to be stimulated—away from the textbooks, away from the laboratory—a refreshing re-emphasis of our interests.

Football team practices into a dark November eve; editors linger in their offices to meet approaching deadlines; a play rehearsal continues; blazened posters are lined upon the walls; a band marches the intricate formations—spirit, sport, publications, music, acting, thinking. A youth's desire, a student's curiosity; above all a satisfaction—co-operation, release, accomplishment—a balance to our way of life

DANCES

SPORTS

Each touchdown puts life into the school's step. Every basket swells its chest, and each homerun puts a proud sparkle in its eye.

Over and over the pulse beats. Once, twice, three times, and again the crescendo of competition vibrates in the air, and in all who breathe its intoxicating ingredients. The unbreakable unison of spirited hands, clapping out a rhythm whose tempo encourages itself to beat again.

The sweet smell of victory, the sour taste of defeat . . . but who could enjoy victory unless they've known defeat? Who could really appreciate the exhilaration of triumph without a sampling of failure? Both come and go, leaving their mark and teaching their individual lesson.

This is what is felt as the last strains of band music filter out, as confetti finally settles on the spike-trodden field, and as the last gymnasium light fades, plunging the ebullient echoes of a well-played game into the serenity of darkness.

With the four hundred thirty-seven personalities presented herewith, Dr. Edwin B. Keim faces the future with a venture into new realms of influence and accomplishment. Now both pupil and mentor are challenged by new experiences in their desire for improvement and satisfaction. As we leave we take this time to extend our gratitude for his guidance and our best wishes for his future success.
